Transition of the Minor Parent into Adulthood 6-25-2012

Incorporate adolescent services into the minor parent's case plan to increase the opportunity for better service delivery and a successful outcome. Utilize adolescent services to promote independence and self-sufficiency for the minor parent's growth and development while under the care of the Division. See CP&P-VI-B-1-300.

For minor parents who will not be returning to their family upon discharge from placement, an independent living permanency goal may be the most appropriate and realistic. In an effort to transition the minor parent into adulthood, the Worker discusses with the minor parent options to independence. These options can include, but are not limited to:

- Life skills;
- Lifelong connections to caring adults;
- Mentoring programs; and
- Self-sufficiency skills.

For minors, including minor parents 14 years of age or older, the Worker assesses the minor parent's life skills proficiency, utilizing the New Jersey Competency Based Life Skill Assessment System. See CP&P-VI-B-1-300. Use this comprehensive, formal assessment process to determine basic competency in a number of life skill areas. The Worker uses the results of this assessment to better understand the minor parent's strengths and needs and assist with transitional planning. Under the John Chafee Foster Care Independence Act of 1999, states are required to plan for the needs of youth in care, and funding is provided for services to assist youth so they may successfully transition from care. See CP&P-VI-B-1-300.
